"After all, Martin Luther King did not say,
'I have an idea for a pilot project. He said,
'I have a dream,' and he turned that dream into concrete action. That action was on a scale that confronted the full scope of need, and it both challenged and defied the status quo.
We can do nothing less."

*****COMMENTARY*****

>>>>What's a Principal to do?

Reported in the L.A. Times (July 18, 1999). The school shootings in Colorado apparently were the last straw for a school principal in La Mirada and his friend (a Riverside County school administrator). They both quit their jobs to go on a cross-country survey to better understand what happening to kids today The principal notes that just before his students were to take the Stanford 9 standardized achievement test, he was exhorting them to hunker down and perform well. But he saw they weren't really listening. It was just five days after the Colorado shootings and "I saw my kids were traumatized and frightened ... and really weren't focusing on this test." . But, its not just about violence. He also is quoted as saying: "I was at a meeting about ending social promotion and none of the principals present thought the legislation was well done, but then we had to sit around and figure out how to implement it. I said: 'I don't belong at this table.'"

Clearly schools need to attend to more than exhortations, testing, and legislating an end to social promotion. In reauthorizing the Elemenary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA), policy makers must expand school reform to encompass comprehensive, multifaceted approaches to addressing barriers to student learning and performance.

>>>GAO Report Questions School Districts' Medicaid Billing Practices

In case you haven't already had this brought to your attention:
A recent US General Accounting Office (GAO) report entitled "Medicaid:

Questionable Practices Boosts Federal Payments for School-Based Services" outlines Congressional concerns about the exponential growth of Medicaid reimbursement to school districts. Questionable practices were raised in relation to administrative costs such as outreach and enrollment assistance, but not for the most frequently compensated costs associated with the delivery of health services. According to the report, the dubious administrative costs refer largely to school personnel providing Medicaid case management-- some school districts have employed private firms to "facilitate their efforts to claim Medicaid reimbursement" and who then take a cut of the generated revenue. IS THERE ANYTHING YOU'D LIKE US TO INCLUDE
IN THE NEXT ISSUE?

THIS IS THE END OF THIS ISSUE OF ENEWS

Below is a brief description of our Center.

WHO ARE WE?

Under the auspices of the School Mental Health Project in the Department of Psychology at UCLA, we have established a Center for Mental Health in Schools. The Project and Center are co-directed by Howard Adelman and Linda Taylor. The Center for Mental Health in Schools at UCLA is one of two national centers funded in October 1995 for five years by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Public Health Service, Health Resources and Services Administration, Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Office of Adolescent Health. The other center is at the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Our group at UCLA approaches mental health and psychosocial concerns from the broad perspective of addressing barriers to learning and promoting healthy development. Specific attention is given policies and strategies that can counter fragmentation and enhance collaboration between school and community programs.

We are involved in model development and implementation, training and technical assistance, and policy analysis. Our activities include gathering and disseminating information, materials development, direct assistance, and facilitating networking and exchanges of ideas.

For more information about the Center or about ENEWS, contact Perry Nelson, Howard Adelman, or Linda Taylor at
