EMERGING ISSUE

>>>>>New Legislation: Ed-Flex <<<<<<

The new "ed-flex" legislation will provide for more waivers and greater latitude in how states and schools spend federal education dollars. In reading the fine print, some folks are worried. For example, they caution that states will be allowed to shift money in ways that hurt poor children, that funds slated for class-size reduction and other prevention initiatives will be used to finance special education, that advocates for addressing barriers to learning will be pitted against each other, and that schools will actually be less accountable for improving academic achievement.

What is your perspective on all this? If you foresee problems, do you see ways to minimize the negative consequences of this major shift in policy?

Let us hear from you and we will include responses in the next issue of ENEWS and/or on our website.

Thinking about School-Community Partnerships: "If our concern is with education, we cannot restrict our attention to the schools, for education is not synonymous with schooling. Children -- and adults -- learn outside school as well as -- perhaps more than -- in school. To say this is not to denigrate the importance of schools; it is to give proper weight to all the other educating forces in American society..." -Charles E. Silberman

COMMENTS/REQUESTS/QUESTIONS

>>Re. the end of social promotions. From the Los Angeles Times (4/17/99): "L.A. school officicals have significantly scaled back ambitious plans to end social promotion next year in the face of daunting financial and logistical hurdles." They anticipate at least 150,000 students are in danger of flunking and the system is having difficulty establishing necessary interventions to counter the need for retention.

>>In response to frequent requests, our Center will soon develop technical aid packets or samplers on the topics of (1) "Outcomes and Other Data Supporting Efforts to Address Barriers to Learning" and (2) "Using Advanced Technology to Enhance Efforts to Address Barriers to Learning" (this will include data and case management systems, use of technology for assessment, prevention, and correction, training, etc.) We are seeking any information you may have that should be included in such works.

>>Correction. Thanks to John Schlitt for calling our attention to an error in last month's ENEWS. "After-School Care in Brief," was published by the National Assembly of National Voluntary Health and Social Welfare Organizations. The contact information was correct.

>>Request. We have received a request from a Mental Health organization that is seeking sample contracts, RFP's, and any other useful information that will help them develop a good contract with a public relations firm to publicize mental health services. If you can help, let us know and we will forward the responses.

>>Request. Meredith Brown, Ph.D., a psychologist at Georgetown University Hospital- Department of Pediatrics, is seeking resources related to schools' role in addressing the increasing rate of eating disorders in young children and adolescents. Contact: Meredith Brown, 2PHC 3300 Reservoir Rd., Washington, DC, 20007.

You can respond directly when contact info is provided, or simply send us the information (smhp@ucla.edu) and we will forward it. If you send it direct, please also send us a copy so we can let others know the info.

NEWS FROM OUR CENTER AND OUR SISTER CENTER

The CENTER for MENTAL HEALTH in SCHOOLS, UCLA:

>>>New Introductory Packet:

"Conduct and Behavior Problems:

Intervention and Resources for School Aged Youth" This introductory packet describes a range of conduct and behavior problems using fact sheets and the classification scheme from the American Pediatric Association. It discusses different intervention approaches based on the degree of problem manifested. Interventions include environmental accommodations, behavioral strategies, and medication. (Because the intent is only to provide a brief overview, also included is a set of references for further reading and a list of agencies that provide information on these problems and relevant interventions.)

>>>New Technical Assistance Sampler on Resilience: "Protective Factors- Resiliency"

Contains a sample of diverse resources and links to other resources and information. Topics include: (1) Protective Factors and Resistance to Psychiatric Disorder; (2) Fostering Resiliency; and (3) Intervening in the School, Home, and Community. Approaches the topic of fostering resilience as an inside-out, deep structure process of changing our own belief systems to see resources and not problems in youth, their families, and their cultures. Fostering resilience also is seen as requiring a focus on policy.

IS THERE ANYTHING YOU'D LIKE US TO INCLUDE IN THE NEXT ISSUE?

THIS IS THE END OF THIS ISSUE OF ENEWS Below is a brief description of our Center.

WHO ARE WE?

Under the auspices of the School Mental Health Project in the Department of Psychology at UCLA, we have established a Center for Mental Health in Schools. The Project and Center are co-directed by Howard Adelman and Linda Taylor.

Our group at UCLA approaches mental health and psychosocial concerns from the broad perspective of addressing barriers to learning and promoting healthy development. Specific attention is given policies and strategies that can counter fragmentation and enhance collaboration between school and community programs.

We are involved in model development and implementation, training and technical assistance, and policy analysis. Our activities include gathering and disseminating information, materials development, direct assistance, and facilitating networking and exchanges of ideas.
