School-Community Collaboration:
A Self-study Survey

Formal efforts to create school-community collaboration to improve school and neighborhood involve building formal relationships to connect resources involved in preK-12 schooling and resources in the community (including formal and informal organizations such as the home, agencies involved in providing health and human services, religion, policing, justice, economic development; fostering youth development, recreation, and enrichment; as well as businesses, unions, governance bodies, and institutions of higher education).

As you work toward enhancing such collaboration, it helps to clarify what you have in place as a basis for determining what needs to be done. You will want to pay special attention to:

- the mechanisms used to enhance collaboration
- clarifying what resources already are available
- how the resources are organized to work together
- what procedures are in place for enhancing resource usefulness

The following survey is designed as a self-study instrument related to school-community collaboration. Stakeholders can use such surveys to map and analyze the current status of their efforts.

This type of self-study is best done by teams. For example, a group of stakeholders could use the items to discuss how well specific processes and programs are functioning and what's not being done. Members of the team initially might work separately in filling out the items, but the real payoff comes from discussing them as a group. The instrument also can be used as a form of program quality review.

In analyzing, the status of their school-community collaboration, the group may decide that some existing activity is not a high priority and that the resources should be redeployed to help establish more important programs. Other activities may be seen as needing to be embellished so that it is effective. Finally, decisions may be made regarding new desired activities, and since not everything can be added at once, priorities and time lines can be established.
I. List Current School-Community Collaboration

Make two lists:

1) activity and collaborators that are focused on improving the school and
2) those focused on improving the neighborhood (through enhancing links with the school, including use of school facilities and resources)
