

NEW REPORT FROM CENTER AT UCLA

Evolving Community Schools and Transforming Student/Learning Supports

Abstract

This report underscores that the prevailing view of community schools is just a beginning for their ongoing development and contribution to improving schools. We stress that defining the initiative as a “community-based effort to coordinate and integrate ... services” raises some concerns and limits their evolution. We illustrate this by highlighting that the movement to link community services to schools inadvertently has worked against efforts to catalyze a much needed transformation in how schools address barriers to learning and teaching.

With respect to community school’s moving forward, we focus on system building that includes an emphasis on transforming student/learning supports and that is pursued by school-home-community collaboratives. The process is described as requiring an expanded framework for school improvement policy that coalesces school and community resources into a unified, comprehensive, and equitable system of interventions by weaving together overlapping institutional missions and resources.

Key challenges for those committed to developing comprehensive and equitable community schools are discussed as including (1) outreach to a wide range of community resources, (2) adopting shared governance and functions, (3) establishing an effective and sustainable collaborative infrastructure, and (4) connecting “families” of community schools to address common concerns and achieve economies of scale.
