**EMERGING ISSUE****

What's Wrong with Kids Today?

Jason Zeidenberg, a policy analyst for the Center for Juvenile Justice in DC, has noted: "The kids are being blamed for everything and credited with nothing. Kids today are a scapegoat generation."

Recent events, once again, are converging in ways that foster the notion that something basically is wrong with young people. Some who raise the matter do so with the view that there are deficiencies in current child rearing situations. These deficiencies often are described differently depending on the socio-economic status of a youngster's family. Whether or not something is basically wrong, a side-effect of all the media attention is to demonize young people and frighten teachers, principals, and the general public in ways that lead to a greater emphasis on social control strategies than on addressing psychosocial and mental health concerns. Over the coming year, a great deal of discussion will focus on how our society should respond to the potential threat of another school shooting, how to handle the bullying and other forms of harassment experienced in schools, and what to do to youth who end up in courtrooms. The policy issue is: What should the balance be between society's responsibility for socializing the young and its responsibility for helping those who need special assistance? The decisions about this are likely to shape the quality of life in the U.S.A. for some time to come.

Do you have a perspective on this? If so, let us know, so we can include it in our efforts to this issue widely discussed.

THIS IS THE END OF THIS ISSUE OF ENEWS

Below is a brief description of our Center

WHO ARE WE?

Under the auspices of the School Mental Health Project in the Department of Psychology at UCLA, we established a Center for Mental Health in Schools in 1995. The Project and Center are co-directed by Howard Adelman and Linda Taylor.

Our group at UCLA approaches mental health and psychosocial concerns from the broad perspective of addressing barriers to learning and promoting healthy development. Specific attention is given policies and strategies that can counter fragmentation and enhance collaboration between school and community programs.

We are involved in model development and implementation, training and technical assistance, and policy analysis. Our activities include gathering and disseminating information, materials development, direct assistance, and facilitating networking and exchanges of ideas.

ENEWS - A Monthly Forum for Sharing and Interchange

Source: UCLA SCHOOL MENTAL HEALTH PROJECT/
CENTER FOR MENTAL HEALTH IN SCHOOLS

Brief Addition and Corrections to April, 2001 (Vol. 5, #7) Issue

(1) We have had a flurry of interest in our new Continuing Education modules focusing on enhancing classroom approaches. In response to queries, we want to be clear that anyone is welcome to use the modules. Although this is a working draft which will continue to be revised, the feedback we have already received indicates that the content can be readily incorporated into inservice (and preservice) programs. The entire curriculum package and accompanying readings entitled: "Enhancing Classroom Approaches for Addressing Barriers to Learning: Classroom Focused Enabling" can be downloaded at <http://smhp.psych.ucla.edu/review.htm#specialannouncement> or a hard copy can be requested from our Center. Any and all feedback is welcome for the revision.

(2) After several months of receiving feedback on the document "Mental Health in Schools: Guidelines, Models, Resources, & Policy Considerations" stemming from the work of the Policy Leadership Cadre for Mental Health in Schools, a final draft is in the works. Any last minute feedback should be sent to Center quickly. The draft is on the Center's website <http://smhp.psych.ucla.edu/policy.htm> A limited number of hard copies of the working draft are still available from the Center.

(3) The Center has just completed a new Technical Aid Packet entitled: "After-School Programs and Addressing Barriers to Learning." The document can be downloaded at <http://smhp.psych.ucla.edu/review.htm#center> or a hard copy can be requested from our Center.

(4) We have been informed that the Center for Effective Collaboration and Practice publishes the Promising Practices series we listed .

"Systems of Care Promising Practices in Children's Mental Health" 3 new volumes (with 7 others available)

- >Cultural Strengths and Challenges in Implementing a System of Care
- >Using Evaluation Data to Manage, Improve, Market and Sustain Children's Services
- >For the Long Haul: Maintaining Systems of Care Beyond the Federal Investment.

The direct link to these is <http://www.air.org/cecp/promisingpractices/Default.htm>

ERRATA

We have been informed of a couple corrections (see below). Sorry for any inconvenience.

***We mistakenly listed as a job opportunity, the request from the Urban Initiatives Office, Public Interest Directorate, American Psychological Association. What they are requesting is help from urban psychologists to build a resource bank of expertise related to the multiple ways psychology can contribute to the improvement of life for people living in urban communities. Contact mjenakovich@apa.org

***Re. The two positions at the National Adolescent Health Center, Konopka Institute for Best Practices in Adolescent Health, University of Minnesota

>>Maternal and Child Health Coordinator> (deadline April 6)

>>Mental Health Project Coordinator> (deadline April 16)

The correct contact is not their website (as we listed). Rather write to their email address: Konopka@tc.umn.edu
